

Louis de Schorlemer

Louis de Schorlemer, a Luxembourg national who was born in 1972, holds a Master's degree in Global Marketing Communication and Advertising (MA) from Emerson College (Boston) and a Master of Business Administration (MBA) from the Vlerick Business School in Belgium.

Louis de Schorlemer is Managing Director of the strategic communications consultancy Corporate Diplomat and lecturer in corporate communications at the Luxembourg School of Business.

From 2003 to 2010, Louis de Schorlemer was Director of Communications, Europe, at the management consultancy Gallup, before moving to the mining group Imerys to become Head of Communications for the Paper & Packaging division. From 2013 to 2016, he was Manager Corporate Communications with responsibility for Europe, Middle East and Africa at Cargill. As Head of Corporate Communications, he headed the internal and external communications department of the Sibelco Group worldwide from 2016 to 2017.

He joined the advisory board of LMO, a British-Luxembourg company developing autonomous systems for space applications, in 2019. Previously, he was a non-executive member of the Supervisory Board of the restaurant guide Gault & Millau in Paris, France, from 2016 to 2018. He is a member of the board of the "Association Luxembourgeoise du Diabète".

Louis de Schorlemer was elected to the Villeroy & Boch AG Supervisory Board in 2018.